“The Problems with Distant Starlight”

Many Christian laymen and apologists alike stumble over what has been dubbed “the distant starlight problem,” citing it as a key obstacle to their acceptance of a young (i.e. ~6,000 year) creation. In this presentation, I'll take this difficult topic by the horns and demonstrate to non-technical audiences how the distant starlight problem is a double-edged sword that cuts both ways—against young- and old-earth creationists alike; it is not the proverbial nail in the young-earth coffin that many think it is.

About Dan Kreft:

Dan Kreft, the Seven-Foot Apologist, is the author of the three-volume book, “Jesus” Is Not the Answer to Every Sunday School Question. He played basketball in the Big Ten, professionally in Europe and the U.S., and has been teaching theology and apologetics to pre-teens through adults since 2003. His passion and calling is to equip believers to have reasonable answers to reasonable questions about their faith. Learn more at
